Vicky Brown, Sales and Marketing Director – Military Division of Analox Sensor Technology earned herself a listing in the Who's Who of Young Business Leaders in 2010. Vicky, 34, has been a director of Analox Sensor Technology since 2003, most recently taking responsibility for the company's Military Division.

Vicky, who was brought up in Seamer, North Yorkshire, joined Analox in 2000. Within three years she was appointed Business Development Director. She has since been largely responsible for developing Analox's military sales sector.

Vicky has spent many years creating unique relationships with representatives of militaries around the world, which has in turn opened doors for Analox. The firm has been invited to NATO Submarine Escape and Rescue Working Group (SMERWG) in 2009, and to present to NATO Submarine Escape Equipment Panel Meeting (SEE) in 2010.

Prior to joining Analox and following her Geography degree from the University of Durham, Vicky spent two years in Zimbabwe. Her first year was spent teaching in a secondary school in a remote bush village, and her second year was spent managing a five star game reserve.

Outside of the office, Vicky is a skilled horse rider. Having ridden since age five, she now owns her own horse, and part owns a second, competing in Eventing at pre novice and novice levels. In 2007 she climbed Mount Kilimanjaro raising £3,000 for charity.

Analox Sensor Technology Ltd is based in Stokesley, North Yorkshire and specialises in the design and manufacture of gas analysers for military and commercial use.
